

The Daily Courant.

Thursday, May 11. 1704.

From the Paris Gazette, dated May 3.

Casal, April 14.

Letters from San Benedetto of the 11th of this Month advise, that the Grand Prior of France had put into Garrison at Revere, the Infantry that was at Modena, 2 Regiments of Horse, and 1 of Dragoons, and given the Command of them to the Sieur de Seuil, Collonel of the Regiment of Bigorre. He had given Orders for blocking up Mirandola by some Regular Troops and Militia; and for 31 Companies of Grenadiers to march the 15th to return to the Duke of Vendome.

From the Leiden Gazette, dated May 13.

Nimes, April 22. The Intendant of this Province, Monsieur de Basville, went from hence the 20th to meet the Marshal de Villars at Beaucaire. The Marshal de Montrevel, to avoid Disputes about Ceremony, and for some private Reasons, would not wait his Successor's coming, but is gone from hence to Montpellier, whence he is to go to Guyenne to command there in the Room of the Marquess de Sourdis. The Action of the 16th of this Month was not disadvantageous to the Camisars, as was at first reported; They kept the Field of Battle, kill'd several Officers, and 180 Soldiers of the King's Troops, and took 38 Horses. There is a talk, that 2 other Actions have pass'd between Alets and Uzes; in which Monsieur de la Lande kill'd a great Number of the Camisars, and seiz'd in a Cave a certain Quantity of Ammunition, 2 Tun of Brandy, Salted Flesh, Beds, Linnen, &c. which they had laid up. 'Tis certain they have taken the Field agen, and that the Marshal de Villars, not daring to come hither directly from Pont St. Esprit, came down the Rhone to Beaucaire and thence hither.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated May 16.

Nimes, April 29. We have had several Reports lately concerning the Camisars, but very different from what we are now well inform'd of. It was said they had almost all laid down their Arms, and beg'd Pardon; but those who have deserted with their Arms are very few, and are incorporated into the King's Troops. The Marshal de Villars went from hence the 24th with our Intendant. We hear he has call'd the Consuls of several Places before him, and charg'd them to endeavour by gentle means to get those who have left their Houses to joyn the Camisars, to return home again; because, he said, the King looks upon them still as Subjects notwithstanding they are Rebels. 'Tis rumour'd he has publish'd a general Amnesty for those who shall return to their Obedience within 8 days. Mean time we hear they continue their Excursions and commit Disorders as formerly. They have kill'd some Men half a League from this Place, and yesterday they pursued the Prevost and 4 Archers who were going with Letters to the Marshal de Villars, but they had the good Fortune to escape. Since which we have Advice, they are come to a Castle within half a League of this Town; whereupon a great Detachment is sent out against them, and the Grenadiers were order'd to take Grenadoes with them. They are not return'd yet.

Lions, May 5. The Count de la Barre, a Subject of the Duke of Savoy, coming to Chamberi disguis'd like a Peasant, and being discover'd there, is brought Prisoner hither. The Count of Wallstein, the Emperor's Ambassador, is arriv'd in this City, accompanied by Monsieur de St. Olon, and is to be conducted to Germany. There is no News from the Camisars at present, more than that they continue their Excursions and Disorders.

From the Paris Gazette, dated May 2.

Paris, May 2. Letters from Languedoc of the 23d Ult. advise, that since the Defeat given to the Rebels the 16th, the Marshal de Montrevel order'd the Sieur de la Lande to march to Brenoux in the Upper Cevennes, where he was inform'd the Rebels were drawing together to make up a new Body of Troops for Cavalier, one of their chief Leaders. The Sieur de la Lande march'd thither with so great Diligence, that charging them before they had time to put themselves into a due Posture of defence, he kill'd 900 of them. The Miquelets returning into their Quarters kill'd 100 more of them. The Sieur de la Lande march'd afterwards towards Youzet, where he had Intelligence the Body of the Rebels beaten by the Marshal de Montrevel had rallied. He fell upon them, kill'd 230 of them, and took 80 Horses with all their Baggage; the rest were pursued, but escap'd into the Woods.

From the Amsterdam Gazette, dated May 16.

Paris, May 7. A Letter from the Marshal de Villars is handed about here, 'tis dated from Nimes April 22. in it he commends the Conduct of the Marshal de Montrevel, and says the long Continuance of the War of the Sevennes is not owing to the ill Conduct of the King's Generals, but to the unlucky Situation of the Country, which affords Places for the Camisars to retreat to on all occasions, Places where they both find Subsistence and may easily defend themselves; where they cannot be attack'd but by a few Troops, because of the Difficulty of the Passages; and when they are beaten, or are minded to avoid fighting, can retreat from one Mountain to another, and save themselves, &c.

The Duke of Schomberg was to set out from Lisbon, to draw the Army together, the 8th of May, 14 days sooner than he design'd, on Advice of the good Disposition of the Spaniards to declare for Charles III. on the first approach of the Forces of the Allies to their Frontiers.
